

THE CONJURING

THE
CONJURING
2

THE
CONJURING
THE DEVIL MADE ME DO IT

THE
CONJURING
LAST RITES

KELOMPOK 8

WALDAN

SYAKIR

RIZKI

list of contents

1. The Conjuring 2

2. The Conjuring the Devil Made me Do it

3. The Conjuring last rites

THE CONJURING 2

Page 1: The Amityville Vision and the Haunting Begins in Enfield

The story begins with Ed and Lorraine Warren investigating the infamous Amityville house. While there, Lorraine experiences a terrifying vision of her husband Ed's death, being impaled by a demonic nun (Valak). This deeply traumatizes Lorraine, leading her to ask Ed to step back from investigating extreme cases.

Meanwhile, in Enfield, London, a struggling single mother named Peggy Hodgson and her children—Margaret, Janet, Johnny, and Billy—begin experiencing bizarre phenomena after Janet playfully uses a Ouija board. Soon, the house is plagued by violent knocking on the walls and moving furniture, while a local neighbor, Vic Nottingham, witnesses some of the initial disturbances.

Page 2: The Spirit of Bill Wilkins and Escalating Terror

The supernatural activity worsens dramatically as young Janet begins sleepwalking and showing signs of full possession. She starts speaking in the raspy, menacing voice of Bill Wilkins, the elderly former owner of the house who claims that he died in the armchair and that the home belongs to him now.

The children and Peggy are gripped by constant fear as doors slam shut, objects fly across rooms, and beds shake violently in the middle of the night, turning their home into a nightmare

Page 3: Media Attention and the Traumatic Fake Evidence

News of the Enfield haunting spreads rapidly through the media, drawing crowds, reporters, and paranormal investigators like Maurice Grosse from the SPR who want to help. The constant public scrutiny places an immense mental and physical toll on the Hodgson family.

The situation hits a devastating low when a news broadcast airs a video showing Janet seemingly faking the supernatural occurrences by breaking kitchen utensils herself. Consequently, the media and experts brand the family as frauds looking for attention.

Page 4: Doubt and the Realization of a Darker Force

Ed and Lorraine Warren, who had previously consulted with Father Gordon, arrive at the house. Initially, they are skeptical after seeing the fabricated video evidence.

However, using her clairvoyant gifts, Lorraine looks deeper into the house and realizes the children are not lying. She senses that the family is being manipulated by a dark, intelligent, and malicious entity far more sinister than a simple restless ghost.

Page 5: The Unmasking of Valak and the Storm

Ed and Lorraine decide to stay at the house to uncover the truth, alongside investigators Maurice Grosse and Anita Gregory. They discover that the ghost of Bill Wilkins is merely a pawn being used and tortured by a much greater demon.

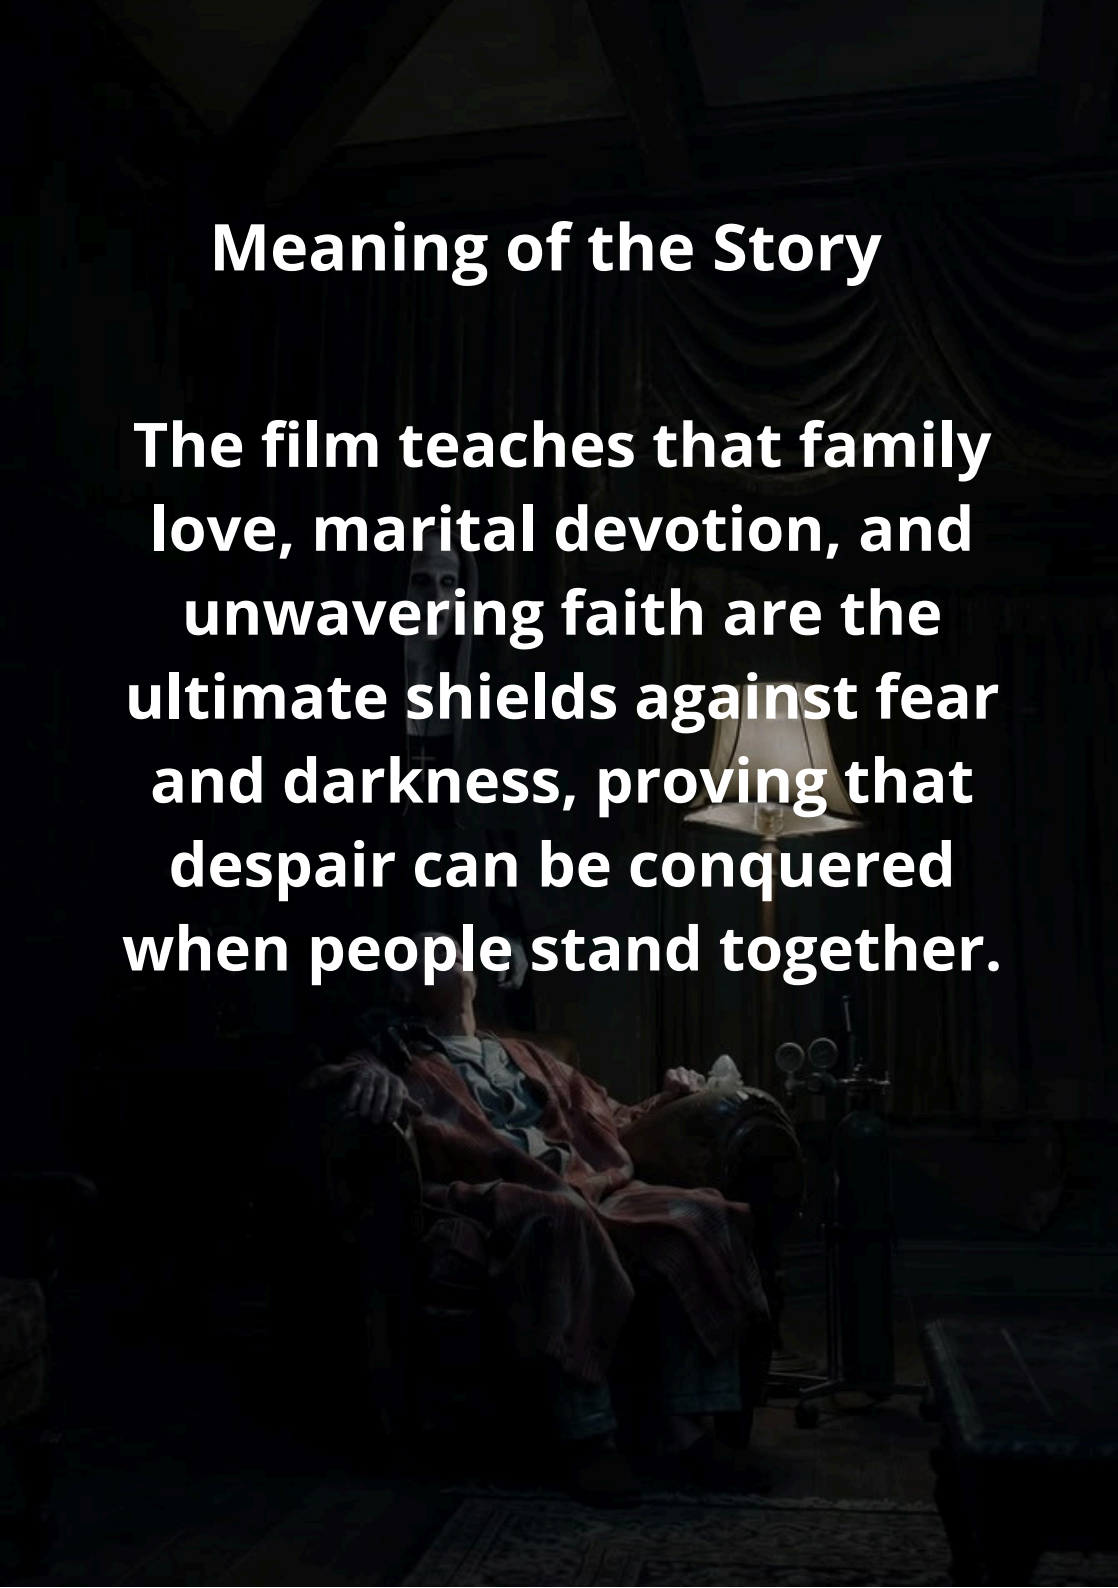

Through a terrifying encounter, Lorraine discovers the true name of the demon: Valak. Suddenly, a massive storm hits, knocking out the power. The house becomes a locked trap, and Janet is violently dragged back inside her room by an unseen force.

Page 6: The Final Battle and Resolution

Ed desperately climbs out a slippery window to save Janet from dangling off the attic ledge. When a lightning strike shatters his support, Ed hangs precariously over a deadly drop while Valak mocks them. Remembering the demon's name from her vision, Lorraine bravely speaks Valak aloud. The power of its true name weakens the demon, allowing Lorraine to pull Ed to safety and banish Valak back to hell.

Meaning of the Story

The film teaches that family love, marital devotion, and unwavering faith are the ultimate shields against fear and darkness, proving that despair can be conquered when people stand together.

THE
CONJURING
THE DEVIL MADE ME DO IT

Introduction of All Characters

Ed Warren: Lorraine's husband and a dedicated Catholic paranormal investigator.

Lorraine Warren: Ed's wife, who possesses the gift of clairvoyance (the ability to see the spiritual realm).

Arne Cheyenne Johnson: The young man accused of murder who claims he was possessed by a demon.

Debbie Glatzel: Arne's girlfriend and David's older sister.

David Glatzel: An 11-year-old boy who initially becomes the first victim of demonic possession.

Glory Glatzel: The mother of Debbie and David.

Father Gordon: A Catholic priest who assists with the initial exorcism process.

Father Kastner: A former Catholic priest who helps Ed and Lorraine research a satanic cult.

Isla / The Occultist: The main antagonist, a female leader of the Disciples of the Ram satanic cult.

Bruno Sauls: The murder victim stabbed to death by Arne while under possession.

Sgt. Clay / Law Enforcement: The officers handling Arne's legal case.

The Genesis of Disaster and the Failed Exorcism

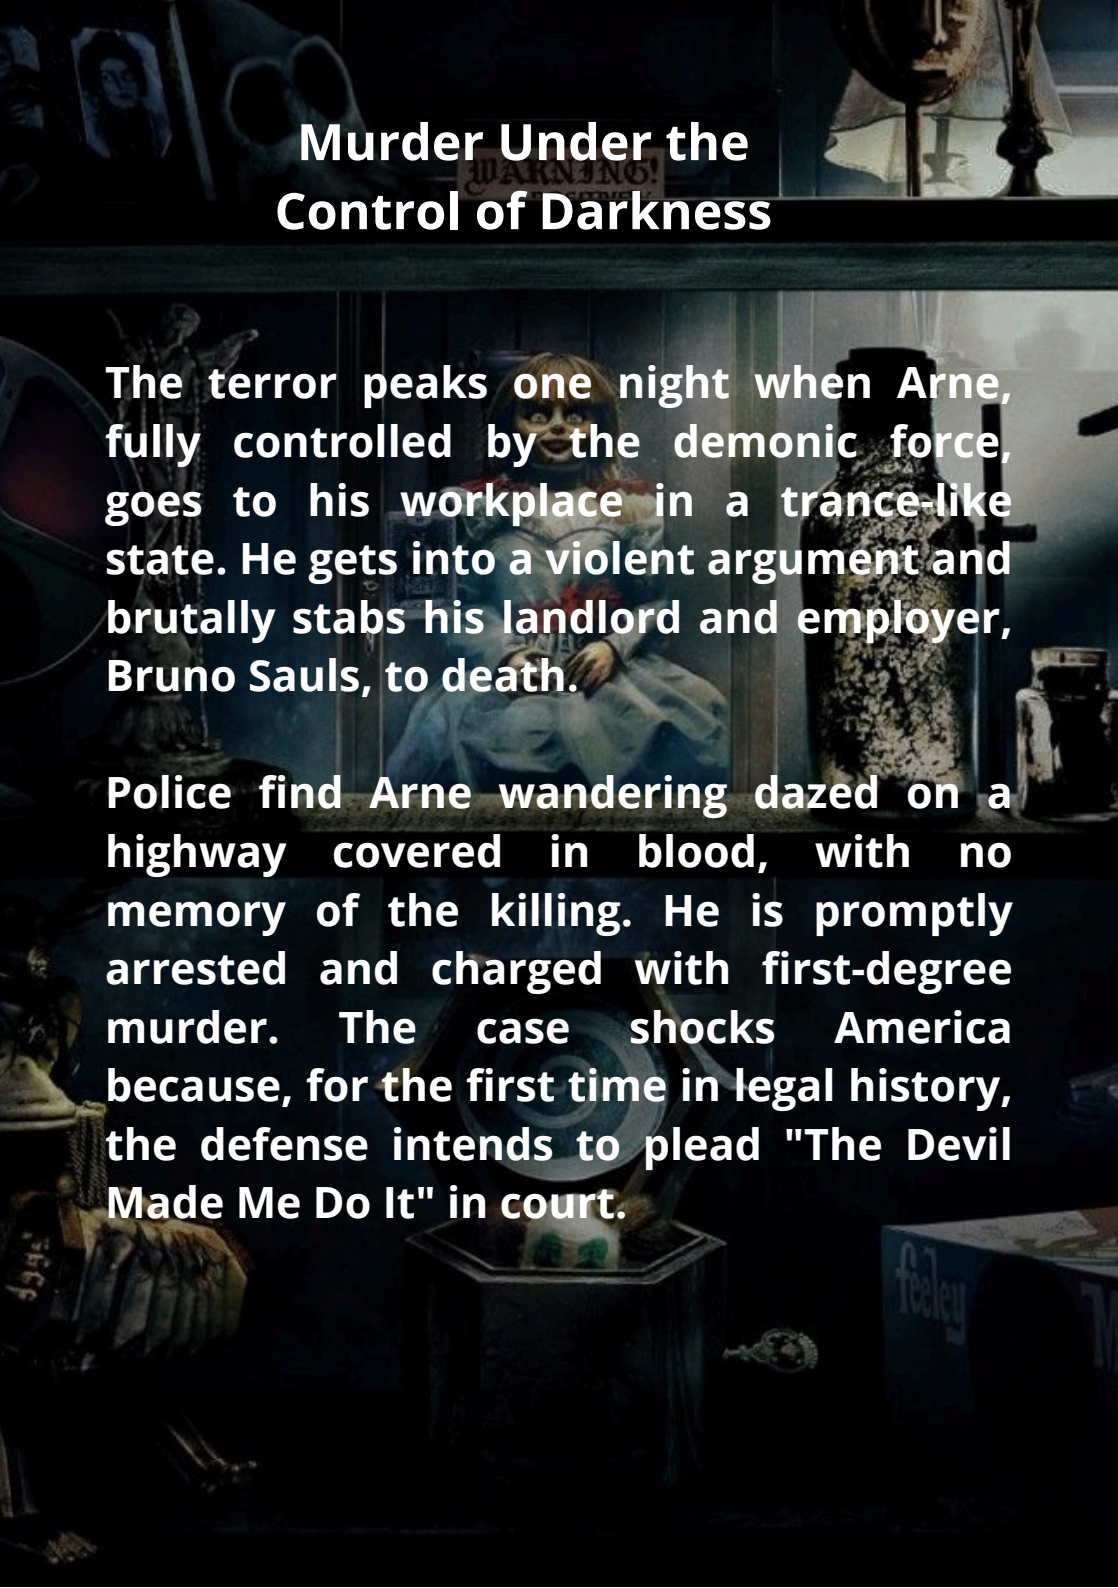

The story begins in 1981 when Ed and Lorraine Warren assist in an emergency exorcism for an 11-year-old boy named David Glatzel in Brookfield, Connecticut. David exhibits extreme signs of possession, his body contorting as he is controlled by a powerful entity.

Amidst the ritual led by Father Gordon, Arne Cheyenne Johnson—the boyfriend of David's sister, Debbie—sincerely cries out, challenging the demon to leave David's body and enter his own. Unbeknownst to anyone at the time, the demon accepts Arne's offer and abandons David, leaving the boy unharmed and fully restored to consciousness.

Whispers of Evil Behind a Peaceful Life

Some time after David's exorcism, Arne and Debbie try to live a normal life, renting a small apartment while Arne works as a floor layer. However, Arne begins experiencing bizarre phenomena: hallucinations, memory blackouts, terrifying visions, and sudden aggressive behavioral changes driven by the entity now residing within him.

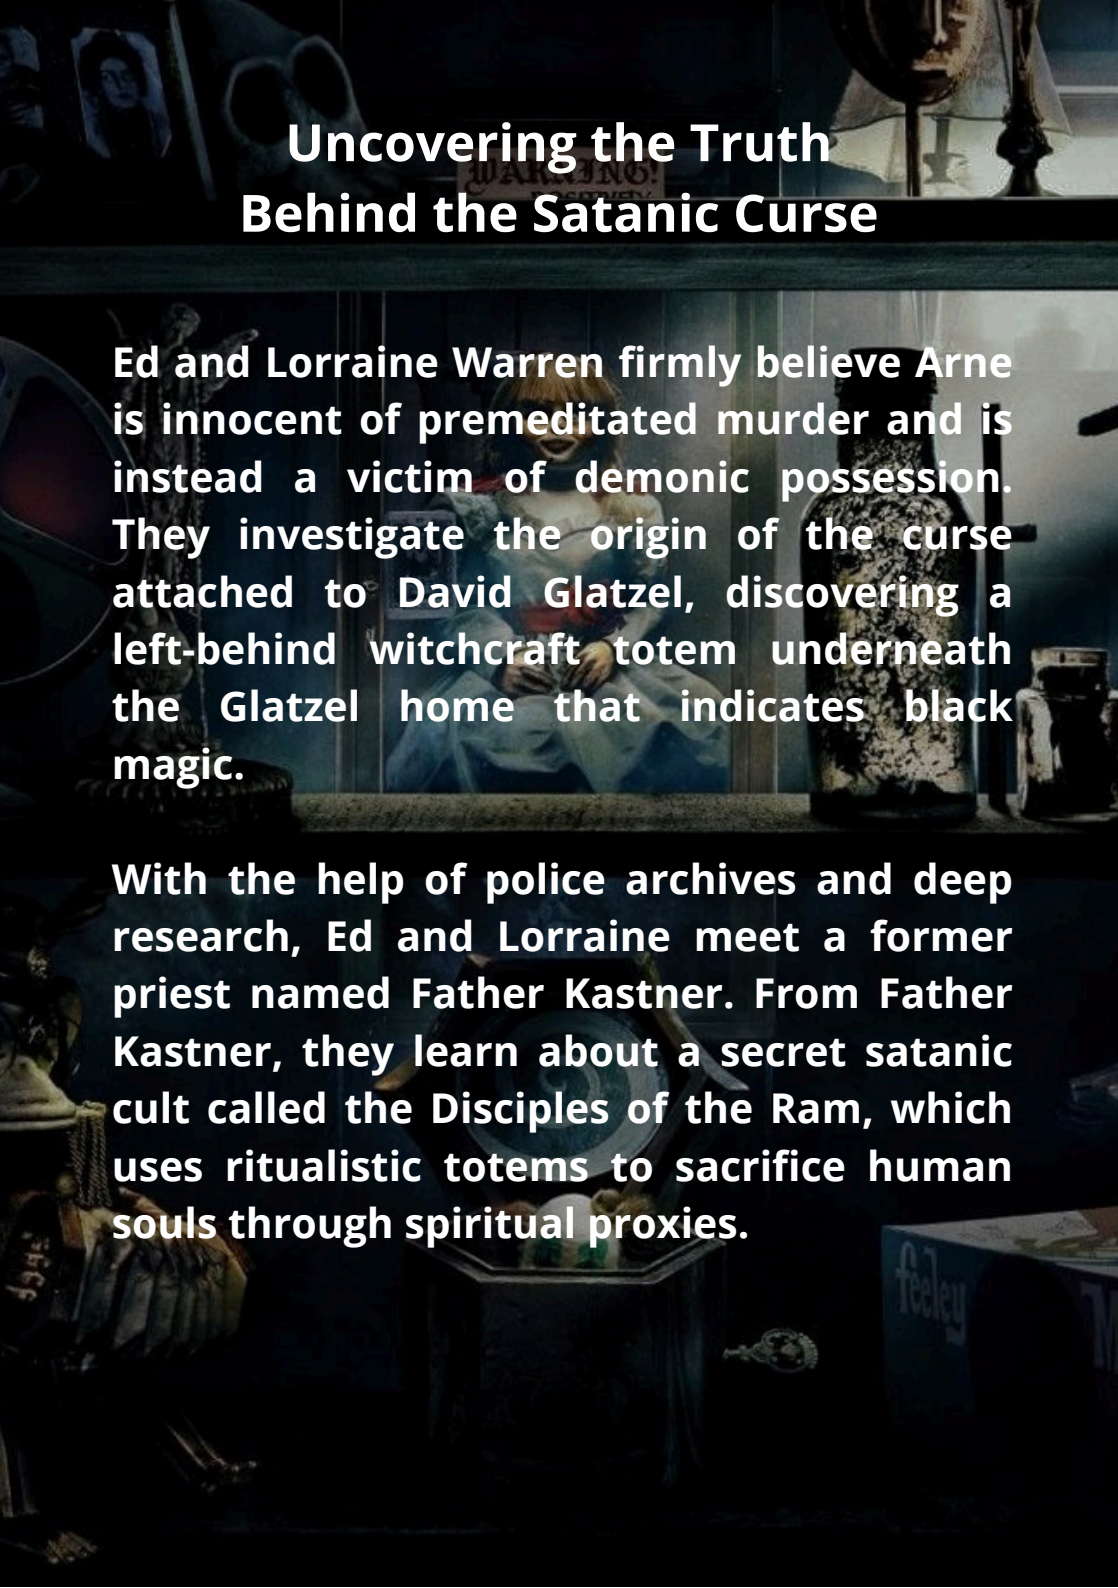

Meanwhile, Ed Warren suffers a severe heart attack in the middle of an investigation due to a violent psychic backlash from the David Glatzel incident, landing him in the hospital with a cane. Despite his weakened physical state, Ed remains determined to help Arne as the situation grows increasingly dire.

Murder Under the Control of Darkness

The terror peaks one night when Arne, fully controlled by the demonic force, goes to his workplace in a trance-like state. He gets into a violent argument and brutally stabs his landlord and employer, Bruno Sauls, to death.

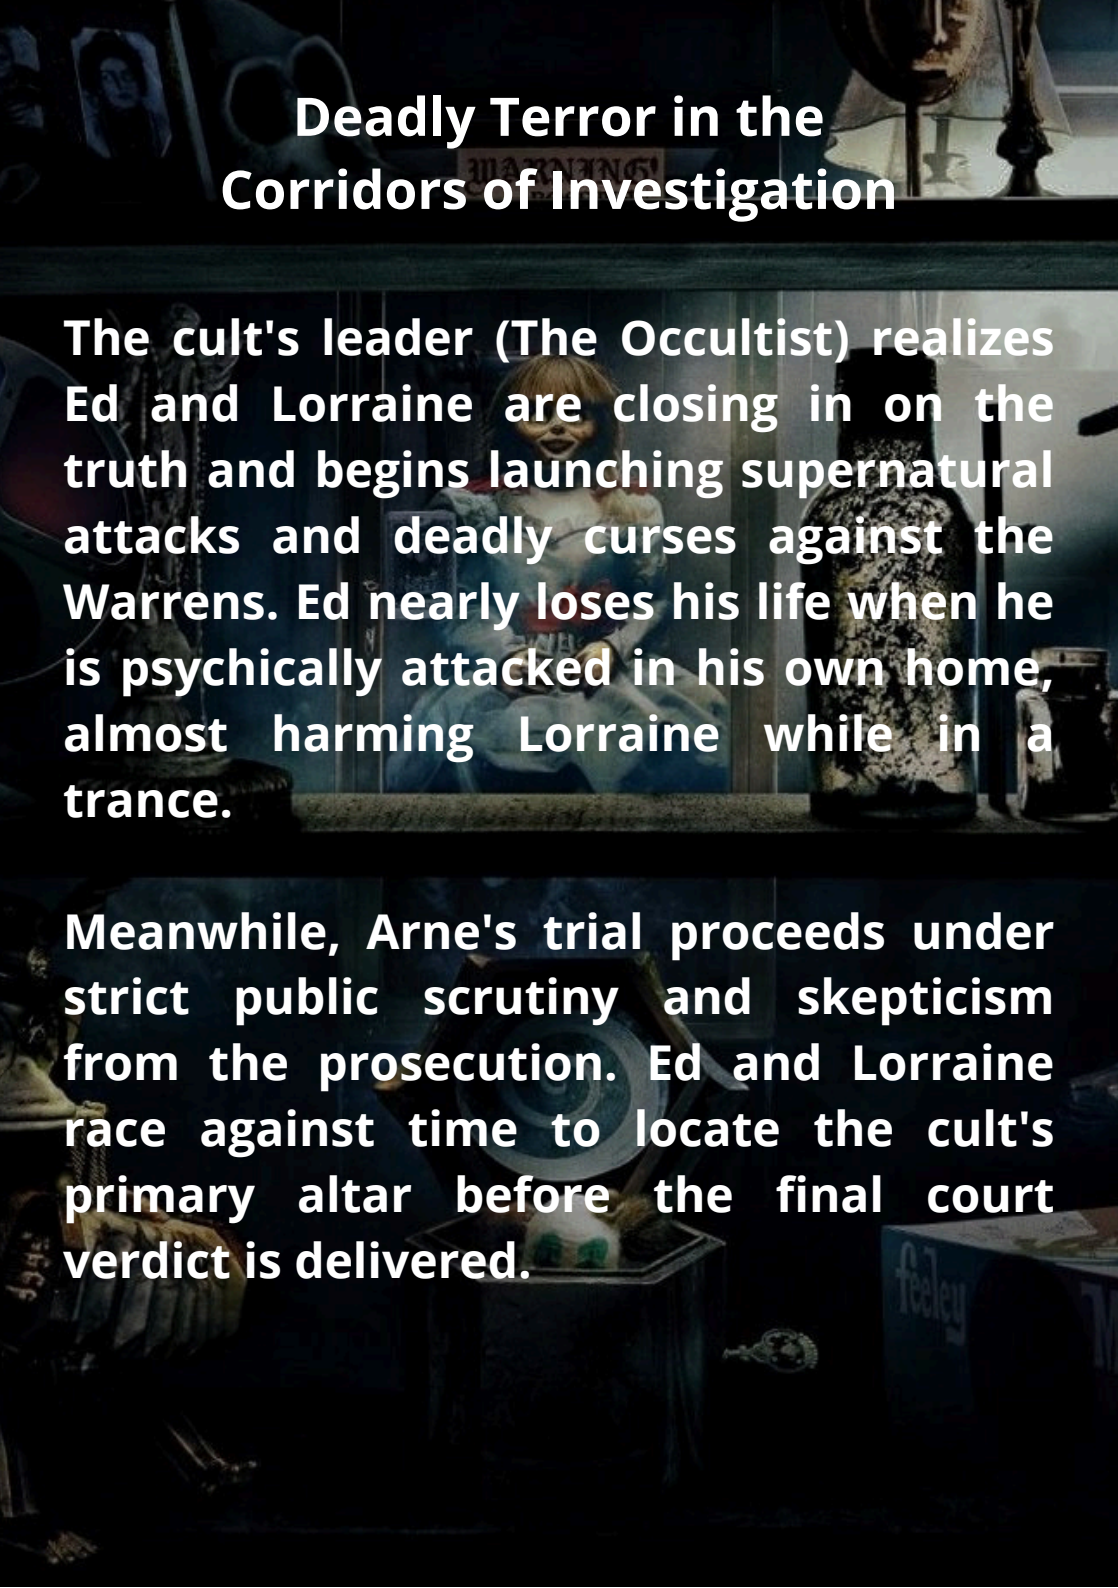

Police find Arne wandering dazed on a highway covered in blood, with no memory of the killing. He is promptly arrested and charged with first-degree murder. The case shocks America because, for the first time in legal history, the defense intends to plead "The Devil Made Me Do It" in court.

Uncovering the Truth Behind the Satanic Curse

Ed and Lorraine Warren firmly believe Arne is innocent of premeditated murder and is instead a victim of demonic possession. They investigate the origin of the curse attached to David Glatzel, discovering a left-behind witchcraft totem underneath the Glatzel home that indicates black magic.

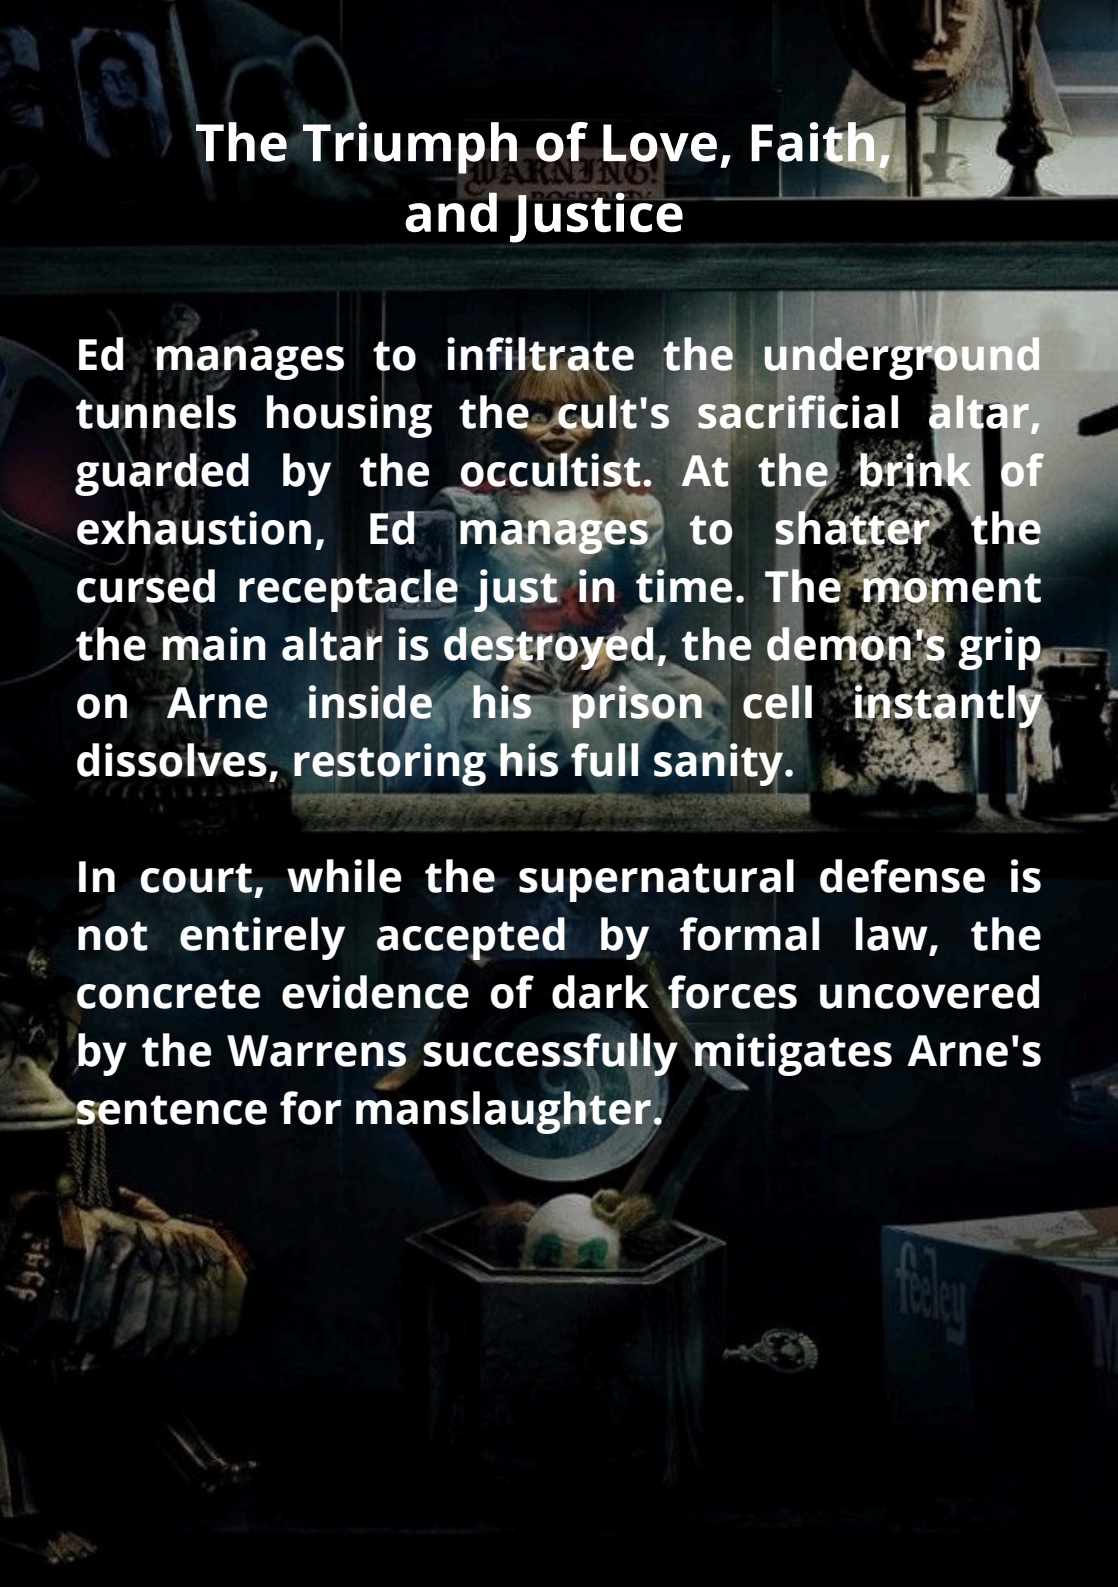

With the help of police archives and deep research, Ed and Lorraine meet a former priest named Father Kastner. From Father Kastner, they learn about a secret satanic cult called the Disciples of the Ram, which uses ritualistic totems to sacrifice human souls through spiritual proxies.

Deadly Terror in the Corridors of Investigation

The cult's leader (The Occultist) realizes Ed and Lorraine are closing in on the truth and begins launching supernatural attacks and deadly curses against the Warrens. Ed nearly loses his life when he is psychically attacked in his own home, almost harming Lorraine while in a trance.

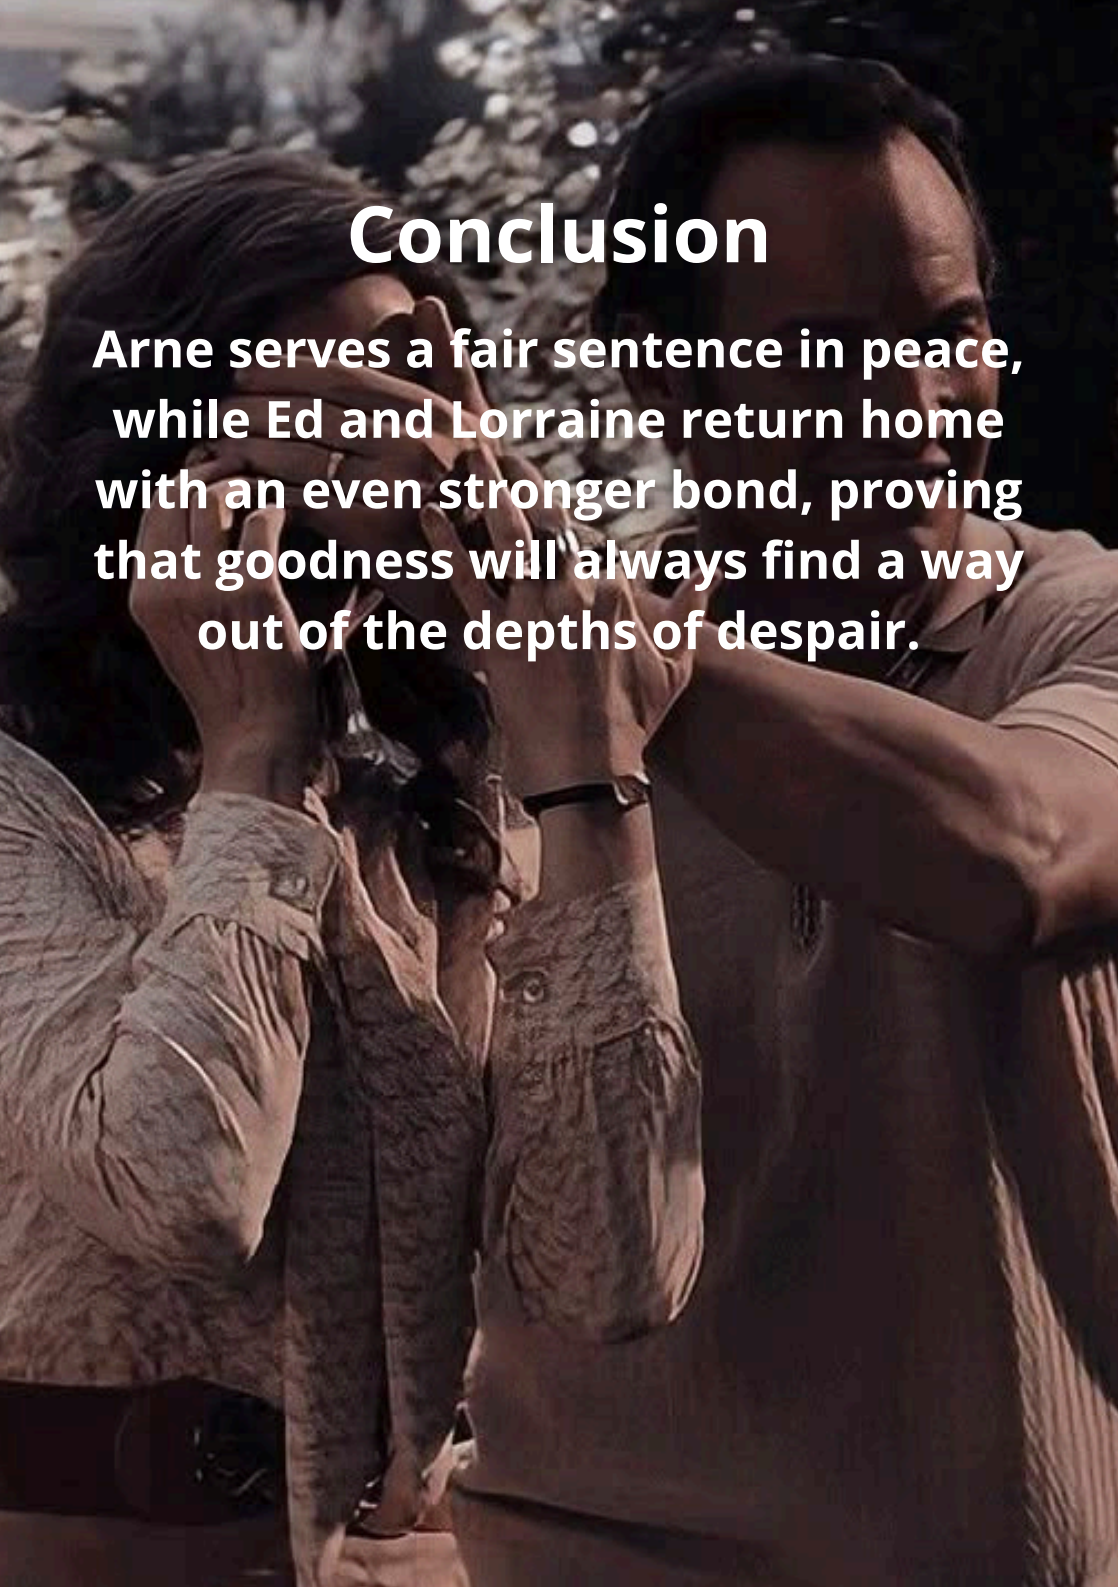

Meanwhile, Arne's trial proceeds under strict public scrutiny and skepticism from the prosecution. Ed and Lorraine race against time to locate the cult's primary altar before the final court verdict is delivered.

The Triumph of Love, Faith, and Justice

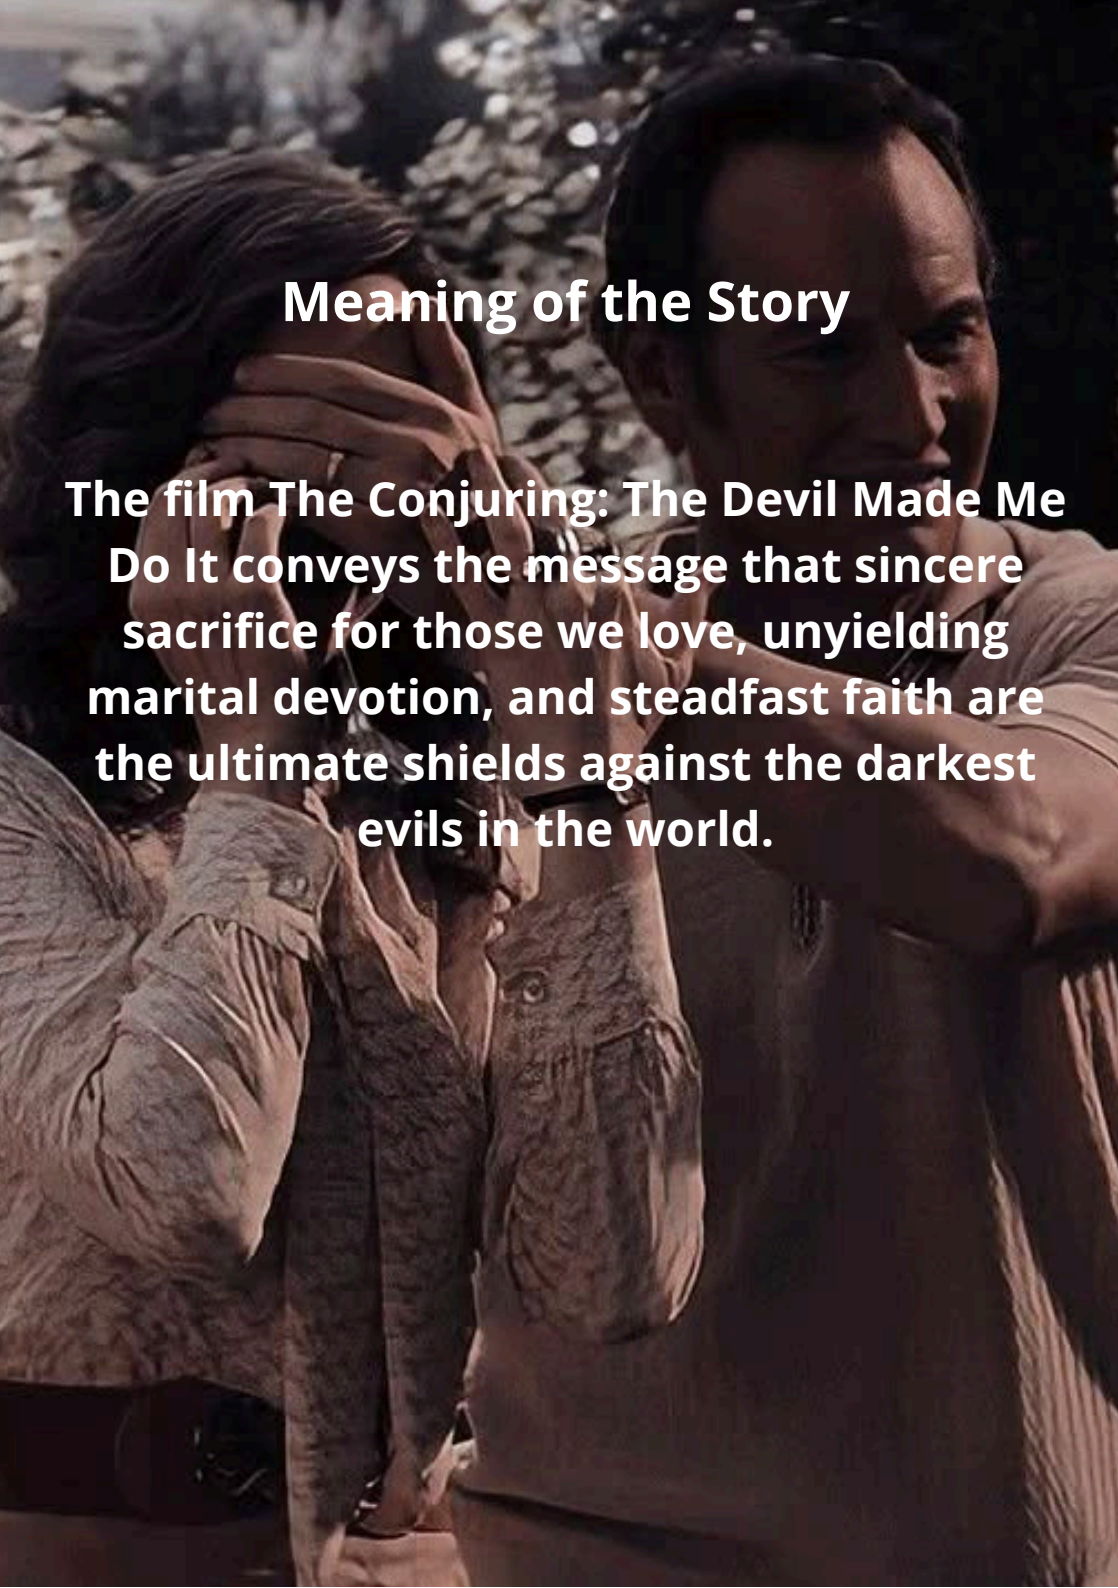

Ed manages to infiltrate the underground tunnels housing the cult's sacrificial altar, guarded by the occultist. At the brink of exhaustion, Ed manages to shatter the cursed receptacle just in time. The moment the main altar is destroyed, the demon's grip on Arne inside his prison cell instantly dissolves, restoring his full sanity.

In court, while the supernatural defense is not entirely accepted by formal law, the concrete evidence of dark forces uncovered by the Warrens successfully mitigates Arne's sentence for manslaughter.

A man and a woman are shown in a close embrace, their faces partially obscured by their hands. They are standing in a rocky, mountainous landscape. The man is wearing a light-colored, short-sleeved shirt and a watch on his left wrist. The woman is wearing a light-colored, long-sleeved shirt. The background is a rugged, rocky terrain with some sparse vegetation.

Conclusion

Arne serves a fair sentence in peace, while Ed and Lorraine return home with an even stronger bond, proving that goodness will always find a way out of the depths of despair.

A cinematic still from the movie 'The Conjuring: The Devil Made Me Do It'. It shows a man and a woman in a dark, rocky, and possibly underground setting. The man is on the right, looking towards the left with a serious expression. He is holding the woman's face with his hands. The woman is on the left, her face partially obscured by her hands and the man's. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights and deep shadows, creating a tense and mysterious atmosphere.

Meaning of the Story

The film The Conjuring: The Devil Made Me Do It conveys the message that sincere sacrifice for those we love, unyielding marital devotion, and steadfast faith are the ultimate shields against the darkest evils in the world.

A movie poster for 'The Conjuring: Last Rites'. The background is a deep red. In the center, a man (Patrick Wilson) and a woman (Vera Farmiga) are shown from the chest up, looking off to the side with serious expressions. They are flanked by the blurred, out-of-focus faces of other people, suggesting a crowd or a group of people. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights on the characters' faces against the dark background.

THE CONJURING

LAST RITES

Introduction of All Characters

Ed Warren: Lorraine's husband, a dedicated Catholic paranormal investigator and demonologist.

Lorraine Warren: Ed's wife, possessing powerful clairvoyant abilities to see spirits and demonic entities.

Judy Warren: The daughter of Ed and Lorraine, who grows up to inherit psychic sensitivities of her own.

Tony Spera: Judy's boyfriend (and future husband), who assists the Warren family in their investigations.

The Smurl Family (Jack and Janet Smurl): A Pennsylvania family dealing with a terrifying, long-term demonic haunting.

Father Gordon: The trusted Catholic priest and family friend whose passing triggers critical turning points.

The Demonic Entity / The Mirror Spirit: The primary antagonist tied to an antique mirror that holds a personal vendetta against the Warren family.

The Genesis of a Personal Grudge

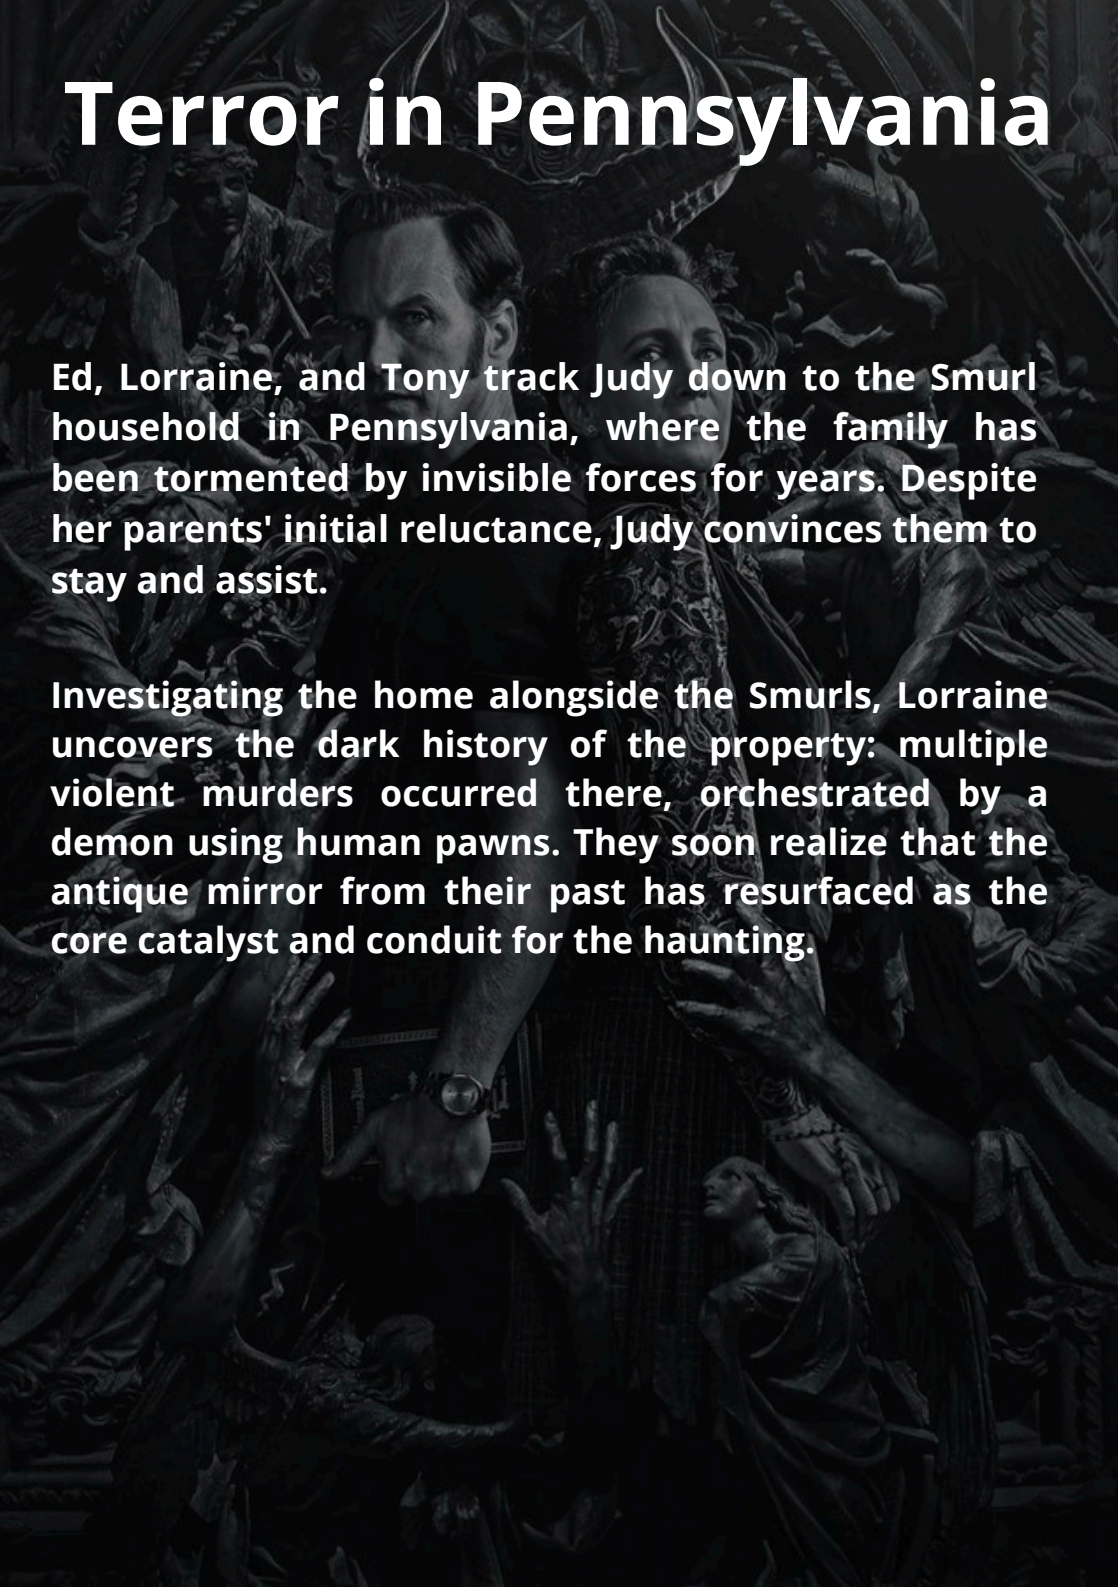

The story opens in 1964 as a flashback, where an expecting Ed and Lorraine Warren investigate a haunting centered around an antique mirror in a curio shop. When Lorraine touches the glass, it shatters. She collapses under a terrifying vision of a malevolent entity and goes into immediate labor. Though Ed rushes her to the hospital, the baby is stillborn, and they narrowly pull Lorraine back from the brink of death. This cursed artifact establishes an early, deeply personal connection to the dark entity that has been tracking them.

The Burden of Sight

Years later, an older Judy Warren begins experiencing severe psychic episodes and panic attacks due to her mounting sensitivity to the paranormal. Lorraine helps ground her, reminding her of childhood coping mechanisms to shut out the spectral world.

Meanwhile, the Warren family receives news regarding the sudden death of their close friend and ally, Father Gordon. During his funeral, Judy experiences a vision revealing that the priest died while investigating a severe, multi-year haunting happening to the Smurl family in Pennsylvania. Driven by a desire to help, Judy secretly decides to pursue the case.

Terror in Pennsylvania

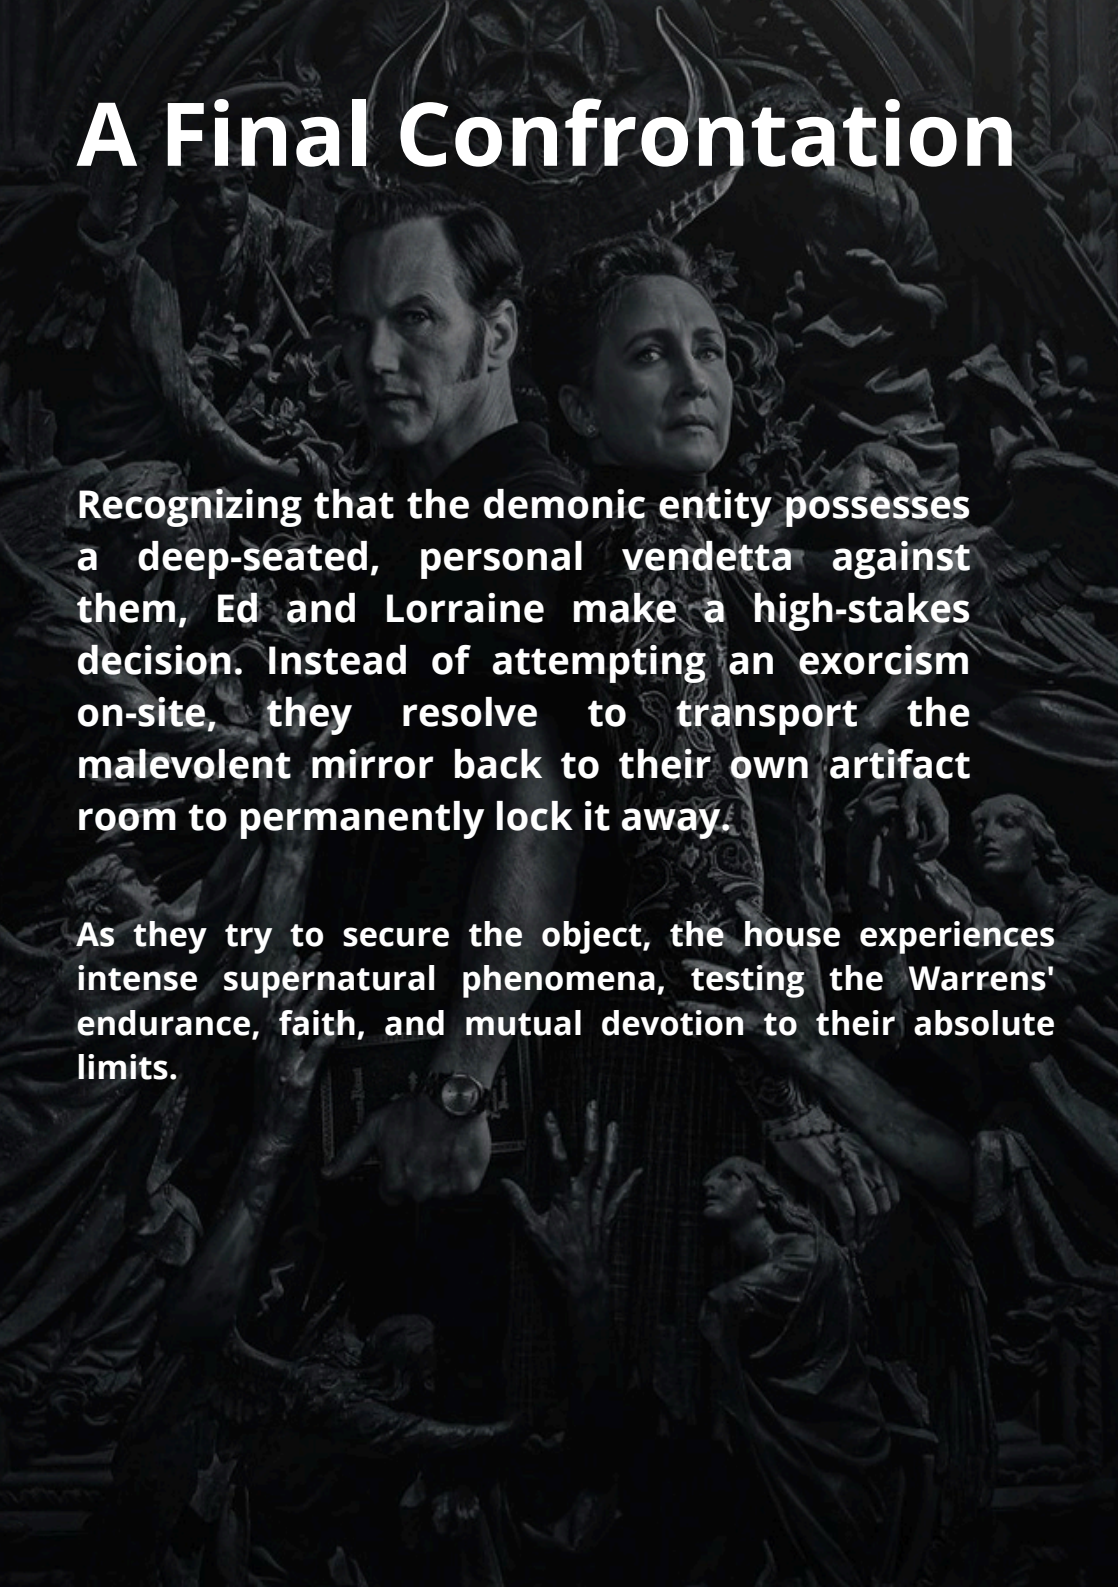

Ed, Lorraine, and Tony track Judy down to the Smurl household in Pennsylvania, where the family has been tormented by invisible forces for years. Despite her parents' initial reluctance, Judy convinces them to stay and assist.

Investigating the home alongside the Smurls, Lorraine uncovers the dark history of the property: multiple violent murders occurred there, orchestrated by a demon using human pawns. They soon realize that the antique mirror from their past has resurfaced as the core catalyst and conduit for the haunting.

The Mirror's Call

The entity targets Judy directly, exploiting her empathy and using illusions to draw her up into the house's dark attic. Trapped in a psychological and physical assault, Judy is haunted by manifestations, including the infamous Annabelle doll.

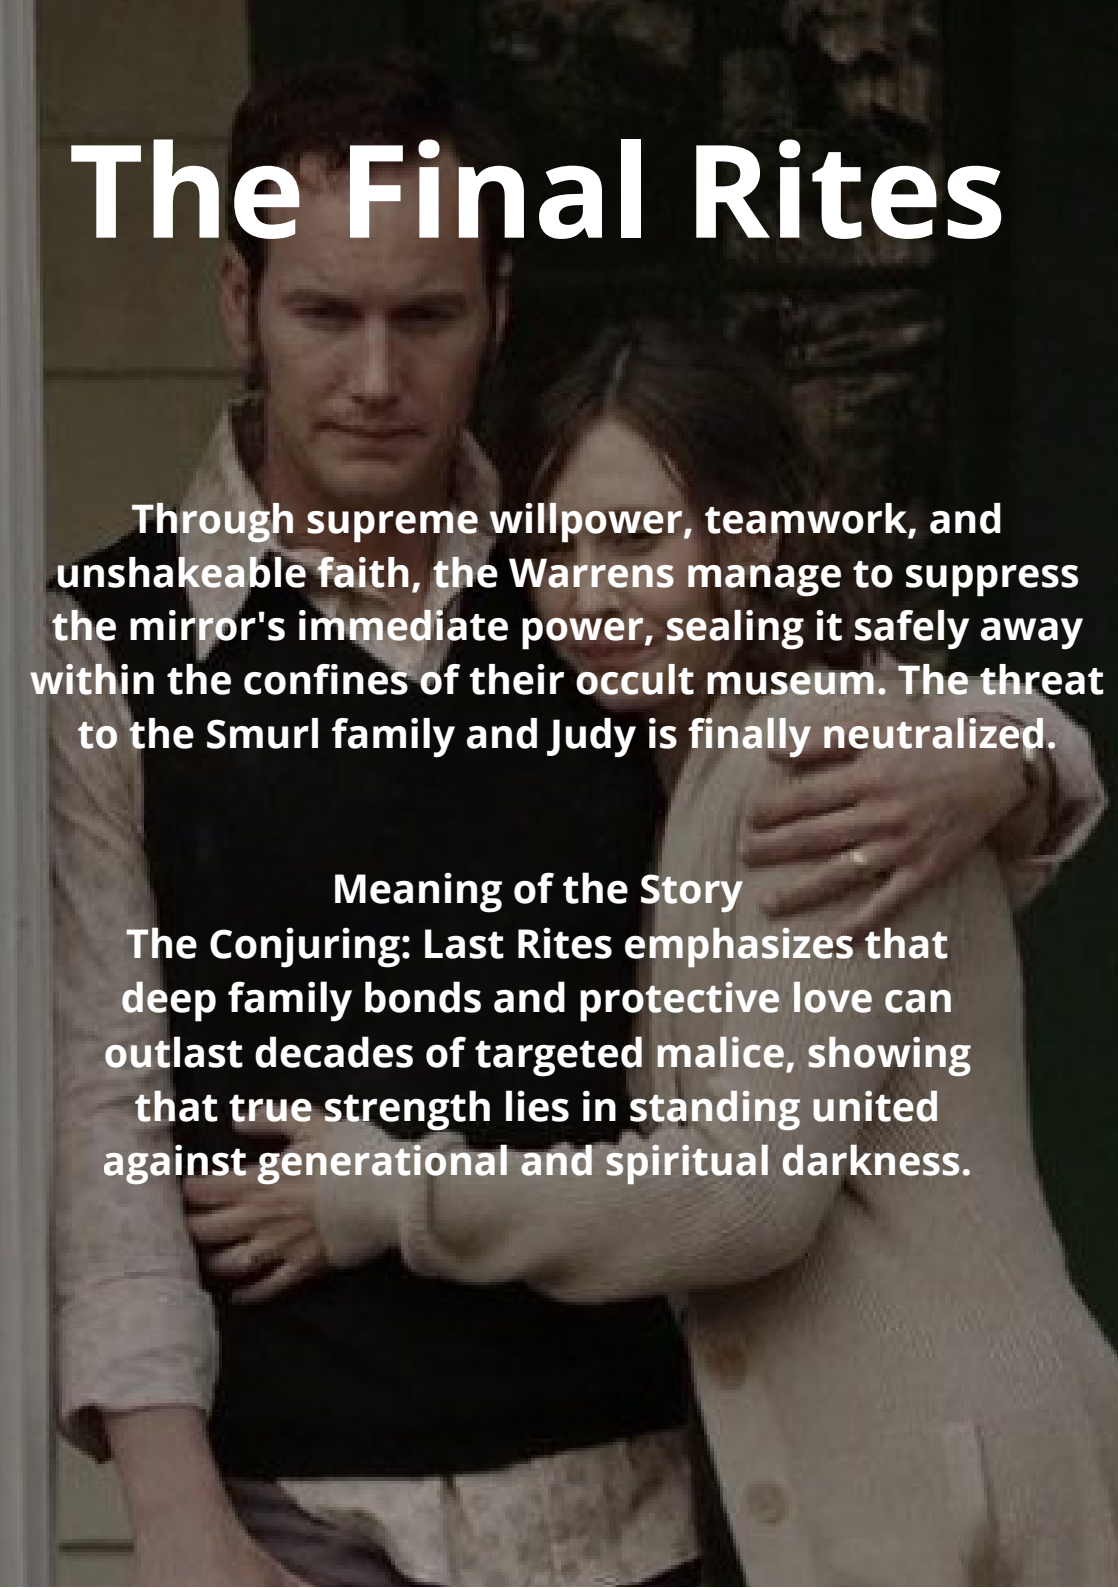

The attack culminates in Judy falling down the steep attic stairs. Though she survives the fall, the physical and psychic toll proves that the demon is actively hunting the Warren family through their daughter.

A Final Confrontation

Recognizing that the demonic entity possesses a deep-seated, personal vendetta against them, Ed and Lorraine make a high-stakes decision. Instead of attempting an exorcism on-site, they resolve to transport the malevolent mirror back to their own artifact room to permanently lock it away.

As they try to secure the object, the house experiences intense supernatural phenomena, testing the Warrens' endurance, faith, and mutual devotion to their absolute limits.

A man and a woman are shown in a close embrace. The man, on the left, has dark hair and a serious expression, wearing a dark vest over a light-colored shirt. The woman, on the right, has long dark hair and is wearing a light-colored, textured cardigan. They are standing in front of a dark, textured wall, possibly stone or brick. The lighting is soft, highlighting their faces and the texture of their clothing.

The Final Rites

Through supreme willpower, teamwork, and unshakeable faith, the Warrens manage to suppress the mirror's immediate power, sealing it safely away within the confines of their occult museum. The threat to the Smurl family and Judy is finally neutralized.

Meaning of the Story

The Conjuring: Last Rites emphasizes that deep family bonds and protective love can outlast decades of targeted malice, showing that true strength lies in standing united against generational and spiritual darkness.

